TOPEKA, KAN., Nov. 20.—This is written on the Rock Island express from Chicago to the Pacific, "the Golden State." The train, just now crossing the wide Missouri near the Kansas City union station, is carrying the Dickey brothers who used to drive cattle to the stockyards here putting up at the St. James hotel in lower Main st., and Colonel Coates, who ran the Coates house and went from floor to floor warning guests when he saw a cyclone coming down Missouri, would not recognize or believe in the Kansas City of today.

SKYSCRAPERS are seen from the big railroad station of solid stone, that once was a wooden shed, with the Coates house, five stories high, as the city's architectural monument.

Powerful motor buses and electric cars rush up and down the hill from the station to the city. In the food old days, when Colonel Nelson, working in his shirt sleeves, in a basement on Delaware ave., was laying the foundation of a fortune that he gave to his city, the only transportation was Mr. Corrigan's one-mule street car line.

Men of Kansas City, Mo., that wanted to gamble took the mule car to Kansas City, Kan., where faro banks lined the streets. Natives of Kansas City, Kan., that wanted to imbibe took the mule car to Kansas City, Mo., where there were many picturesque saloons and "the Dutchman" gave you a large slice of roast beef, all the corn and potatoes you wanted and a big glass of beer for 15 cents.

Alcohol was plentiful in Missouri, where gambling was forbidden, and rambling was wide open in Kansas, where alcohol was forbidden.

Mr. Corrigan's mules were the ties that united the two blessings.

THE ROCK ISLAND "Golden State" train runs on an excellent road-bed that gives sound sleep to parts of the United States new to those that use, ordinarily, the Santa Fe, Union Pacific, or other north routes.

From Kansas City the "Golden State" turns south, through Kansas, a strip of Oklahoma, across northern Texas, through the south-west corner of New Mexico, into Texas again at El Paso and along the northern border of old Mexico, through Arizona, changing to the Southern Pacific system in New Mexico.

SUCH A TRIP is made with utmost comfort, thanks to modern transportation and perfect equipment. Work can be done on the train as well as at home, and one can think more actively, along new lines.

THE ROCK ISLAND railroad map of the United States supplies sufficient inspiration, spreading out the great surface of this country before you.

To the right you see the Atlantic ocean, with Europe and its troubles on the far side. On the north, Canada, and on far to the north-west, Alaska, another empire.

The Great Lakes, Superior, Michigan, Huron, Erie, Ontario, spread out their blue surfaces, enough

SMITH DENIES SLAYING WIFE; DIES IN CHAIR

Condemned Man Goes To Death Calmly; Asks Forgiveness

PENS NOTE CLAIMING INNOCENCE IN CASE

Last Thoughts Turn To Slain Wife; Governor Refuses Stay

(By Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, Nov. 21.—His last thoughts of the wife whose death he was convicted of plotting with Mrs. Maude Lowther, Tilby Smith died in the electric chair at Ohio penitentiary last night after penning a note denying blame for the crime.

Dies At 6:59 Friday

The 26-year-old Ashtabula truckman, struggling to retain his composure, entered the death chamber at 6:59 p. m. The current was applied at 7:01 and the prison physician pronounced him dead seven minutes later.

Calm during the day, Smith gave way to his emotions as the death hour approached and requested the presence of Mrs. Preston E. Thomas, wife of the warden, at his last meal. Mrs. Thomas joined him but neither touched the food, a chicken dinner that the doomed man had ordered earlier in the day.

Apparently consoled by the talk with Mrs. Thomas, Smith walked unaided to the room where a group of witnesses waited to watch him die. As he heaved himself in the electric chair, his eyes wandered about the little room and finally to the guards who adjusted the electrodes.

Thoughts Turn To Wife

The dead silence of the chamber was broken when Smith, just as the mask dropped over his face,

HARDING'S NAME ON HONOR ROLL

Former President Given Place In Journalism Hall of Fame

(By Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, Nov. 21.—Ohio's Journalism hall of fame today had twenty names on its roll.

Added to those of seventeen others listed in previous years, the names of the late President Harding, John Brough and Charles Browne was placed on the roster at a dinner attended by 150 representative newspaper men and women here last night.

The ceremonies included addresses by William G. Vorpe, feature editor of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, who described Browne's career as a famous humorist under the name of Artemus Ward; George H. Van Fleet of the Marion Star, published by Harding before he rose to the presidency; and W. F. Wiley of the Cincinnati Enquirer, the newspaper founded by Brough.

The Hall of Fame was established eight years ago to honor the memory of deceased Ohio leaders whose foundation in life was newspaper work.

Snow and sleet was reported in northeastern North Dakota, with wire communications interrupted in some places. Highway traffic as far north as Frafton, N. D., was difficult because of the heavy snow.

Woman, 94, is Active as Elder

Miss Hannah Blackburn, New Waterford, Attends Wilbur Friends Church Meet; Has Brother In 86th Year

Miss Hannah Blackburn

Miss Hannah Blackburn, 94, who lives west of New Waterford, and was in Salem recently to attend a meeting of ministers and elders of the Wilbur society of Friends church, is a sister of Thomas Blackburn, Salem, R. D. who is in his 86th year. She has two nephews, Dr. W. J. Blackburn, and C. S. French, and five nieces, Misses Abby, Mary, Annie, Myra and Lida Blackburn, living in and near this city.

Born in Pennsylvania

Born near Brookville, Pa., Miss Blackburn spent her early life in the Keystone state. There were 14 children in the family. It was said of this family "that every one worked hard and learned to do without most of what they wanted."

In 1869 the family moved to Middleton neighborhood. Four sisters and two brothers were members of the home circle for four years. Then the brothers married. In 1876 her father died. Her mother died in 1877. In a few years one of the sisters married, leaving three sisters in the old home. Lydia died during an influenza epidemic in 1892, and Amy in 1894. Since then Hannah and a niece have lived alone.

Always of a retiring disposition, Miss Blackburn has not become widely known outside of a comparatively small circle of relatives and friends to whom she has long been "Aunt Hannah."

Home Is Chief Pleasure

For 94 years, the world and its troubles have revolved around the life of Hannah Blackburn, touching her physically and often with a rude hand; but leaving her poised and unquivering as she accepted with unwavering faith whatever of sorrow, suffering or loss came her way.

It is said of her that the habit of acquiescence with the inevitable has resulted in a serenity which has endeared her to all who know her intimately.

As the years pile up her chief pleasure is in the home and its homely duties. "The friends who come to visit her and the books and papers that she reads all help to keep her young," according to her family.

GERMAN PLANE WILL ATTEMPT SPEED RECORD

All-Metal Monoplane Said Capable of Traveling 1,000 Miles an Hour

(By Associated Press)
CLEVELAND, Nov. 21.—A long, all-metal monoplane designed to fly 1,000 miles an hour through the stratosphere and keep pace with the clock, is being tested in Germany.

Engineer Reveals Plans

Construction of the plane, conceived by Dr. Hugo Junkers, famous aircraft builder, was revealed here by C. S. Von Heydekamp, research engineer of Philadelphia.

The plane, built of Duralumin, was finished last August and since then has been given tests preliminary to flights in the stratosphere. Von Heydekamp said. At 15,000 meters, or about 10 miles, it is expected to reach its maximum efficiency.

Two passengers will be sealed in an air-tight cabin, which is insulated against the cold, and designed to resist internal pressure when the plane climbs into the stratosphere.

Electrically Heated

A compressor will supply oxygen and carbon dioxide exhaled by the occupants will be disposed of by a special apparatus. The cabin will be electrically heated. The motor contains a greater amount of magnesium than any other yet built.

"In construction the plane, it was necessary to combat two things—the extremely low temperatures which exist at 10 miles from the earth and the thin atmosphere," Von Heydekamp said. One all-important problem, that of ice forming on the outside as the ship reaches the altitude of extreme cold, is yet to be solved.

The fuselage of the plane is about 60 feet long and its wing spread is 40 feet.

Von Heydekamp, who saw the plane in Germany, came here to attend a gathering of metallurgists sponsored by the Cleveland Engineering society.

"Mail Early" is Christmas Tip of Postmaster Eckstein

List Deadlines for Sending Gifts To Foreign Countries

If you are planning on sending Christmas presents to friends or relatives in foreign countries they should be placed in the mails within the next two weeks, Postmaster Frank J. Eckstein, requesting Salem residents to "shop early and mail early," announced today.

Lists Final Dates

Closing dates of Christmas mails to all foreign countries were listed today by Eckstein, giving time of sailing for the last ships which are certain to get Christmas packages delivered on time. Packages from Salem going by way of Atlantic ships must be in mails 36 to 48 hours ahead of sailing dates while those for Pacific ships should be mailed at least five days ahead.

The postmaster also announced new letter rates to the British Isles, requiring five cents for the first ounce and three cents for each additional ounce. Single post cards go for three cents. To Canada cost of letters is three cents and postcards two cents.

Parcels weighing not more than four pounds six ounces may be sent abroad for letter rates but an invoice of customs slip is required.

AS ITALIAN MINISTER VISITS U. S.

Surrounded by a veritable army of guards, mounted and on foot, Signor Dino Grandi, Italy's Foreign Minister, was welcomed to New York with the usual parade up the canyon of Broadway and the reception at City Hall by Mayor Walker. The visiting Italian official, protected by thousands of blue-coats, soldiers, sailors and marines, aided by secret service men from Washington to prevent anti-Fascist demonstrations, is seen riding up Broadway in car. He is shown by arrow. Note the policemen on all sides. The second car is filled with watchful detectives. The close-up of Grandi at left shows, left to right, Italian Ambassador De Martino, the Foreign Minister waving and Elmer E. Brown, chancellor of New York University, chairman of Mayor's Reception Committee.

Gowns of Women Shame Ghandi at Astor Reception

LONDON, Nov. 21.—Mahatma Ghandi went to a reception last night at the home of Lady Astor. Today he disclosed that the gowns of the women guests caused him to lower his eyes in shame.

"Even in Tropical India where the temperature often reaches 120 degrees, women never would dream of appearing on the streets half dressed as they do in London," he said. "Western women are mad with their own vanity. They worship the god of fashion. It is sacrilege for them to allow beauty doctors to mar the faces God has given them, to pluck their eyebrows and distort their features."

The sisters, failing yesterday to settle the matter privately, agreed to let a jury make the decision.

GRANDI ISSUES LOYALTY PLEAS

Tells American Italians To Be Loyal To U. S. In Speech Friday

(By Associated Press)
PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 21.—Americans of Italian blood can best show their natural affection for Italy, Signor Dino Grandi, foreign minister of Italy, asserts, by being loyal citizens of the United States.

Speaking in the name of his country and of Mussolini at a dinner in his honor given by the Sons of Italy last night, Signor Grandi emphasized the Americans of Italian blood are Americans, not Italians. People in Italy wish them to be the best of America's citizens he said.

Signor Grandi and his party leave today for Baltimore after being feted here and in New York yesterday.

Last night he cited to the Sons of Italy in America "you are Americans, loyal citizens of the great republic of the stars. This is your country, to it you have given your work and your industry, your love and you are giving your descendants."

Practical Side of Housing

Of the various proposals to solve financial problems that have been suggested none has been granted a more favorable reception than President Hoover's plan for establishment of a system of home loan discount banks to release frozen real estate assets and promote a revival of home building. Since its publication Nov. 13 a vast deal of favorable comment has been forthcoming. Unlike the plan for a national credit corporation it was close to the individual problems of millions of home owners and others who hope to become home owners. It was a sound proposal for solution of an important domestic problem.

Congress will be asked to endorse the plan, which undoubtedly will have received the endorsement of Mr. Hoover's conference on home building and home ownership by that time. The conference is to convene in Washington Dec. 2. Congress convenes Dec. 4.

The problem of home building financing, while particularly acute at present, existed before the depression and will exist when it is over. The Hoover plan is intended to strengthen those institutions which make home financing all or part of their business permanently, as well as through the remainder of the depression.

It is common knowledge that residential building touched a new low for the depression in September. At present the principal prospect for betterment in this fundamental business activity is eventual accumulation of a housing shortage, such as led to the building boom that started in 1922 after the depression of 1921. The prospect is somewhat clouded, however, by "huddling"—the tendency in difficult times to move into smaller quarters and to "double up" with other families for the sake of living economy. This tendency not only is reflected in the demand for new housing space, but in the type of new building being done as well. Many new apartment houses, for instance, feature smaller living quarters than probably will be in demand when the depression is over.

These considerations, however, are closely connected with current conditions. In better times the opposite is true. Instead of "huddling" families "spread out" in larger quarters. The President's plan is designed to make it easier for them to afford more commodious quarters as quickly and easily as possible. A revival of building now would hasten recovery from the depression; a continuance of building, with the aid of more satisfactory financing, would help to stabilize business permanently. Strengthening of the credit system in home building is needed.

Funds for financing of home construction come chiefly from building and loan associations, insurance companies, mortgage companies and savings banks, through mortgages. It is one of the anomalies of real estate mortgage loans, however, that they are rated highly as safe investments, but are highly illiquid. The home owner who wants an extension finds that he cannot get it, due to extraordinary strain on his bank, perhaps. Unless he can raise money elsewhere, therefore, the mortgage may be foreclosed and the owner's equity wiped out. The general purpose behind Mr. Hoover's plan is to aid banks carrying large numbers of real estate mortgages, enabling them, in turn, to help home builders. A commendable feature of the plan, incidentally, is that it promises to accomplish its purpose without disturbing the existing and experienced institutions engaged directly in the business of home financing. The public, needless to say, is far more concerned with congressional action on this plan than it is with action on any one of several problems having an international flavor.

What Others Say

AMERICAN POLICY IN MANCHURIA

There has been much speculation regarding the essential aims of the policy of the United States toward the Sino-Japanese dispute over Manchuria. Recent developments indicate that the Washington administration fully realizes the complexity and gravity of the situation and has sought to follow a reasonable, and truly impartial course conducive to peace and practical justice.

It has been assumed by many that Japan has pursued a deliberately aggressive policy toward China and that it intended, by hook or crook, to obtain control over Manchuria or those parts of it in which it claims an interest under treaties and informal understandings. It has been supposed that helpless, divided China was wholly innocent of positive or negative offense.

That, however, is not even an approximately correct representation of the facts. China is not able to protect Japanese citizens or Japanese property in Manchuria, and the so-called nationalist government in Nanking is not able to control the war lords operating in the remote eastern provinces. Japan has not acted without provocation, and orders to the Japanese to evacuate territory not in the railroad zone, regardless of consequences, are irrational and futile. And China is too anxious to unload the entire burden on the League of Nations or the United States—a hope that does not deserve encouragement.

The council of the league has invited rebuff by oversimplifying an intricate question. The United States, fortunately, has avoided that mistake, and is in position to act as the sincere friend of both China and Japan. It is to be borne in mind that Japan has its own imperialist, militaristic and annexationist to reckon with, and that there has been sharp conflict between the war department and the foreign office in Tokyo. The latter has stood for conciliation, while the war office has known how to appeal to mob passion, prejudice and suspicion.

A way out of the Manchurian crisis may be found if the council of the league, following the example of the United States, gets down to realities, and proposes or approves plans which the Japanese emperor and his cabinet can accept without dangerous loss of prestige. There is no reason why evacuation of Manchuria and negotiations between China and Japan should not proceed simultaneously.

The Washington government deserves commendation for its intelligent handling of a perilous problem which, if dealt with rashly or dogmatically, might lead to the disaster the world is desirous of averting.—Chicago News

WHERE JAPANESE WON DECISIVE BATTLE

A street scene in the ancient walled city of Taitshar, capital of the province of Heilungkiang, in Northeastern Manchuria, which Japanese troops captured with airplanes, artillery, infantry and cavalry from General Ma Chan-Shan's Chinese army in one of the most decisive battles of the Sino-Japanese "war." Once in command of Taitshar, the victorious Japanese pursued the fleeing Chinese farther north into territory under the wing of Soviet Russia. The battle which won Taitshar for the Nipponese was fought in frigid sub-zero temperatures. Map indicates location of city, and Mukden, where warfare originally centered.

Facts Concerning Appendicitis

In a medical survey recently made in Philadelphia, many interesting facts were brought to light concerning appendicitis. The statistics covering the clinical records of over 5,000 patients in 27 hospitals, were carefully studied.

It is hoped that out of this careful survey of figures and statistics, it may be possible to reduce the death rate in acute appendicitis. Diseases, like typhoid, diphtheria and smallpox are growing remarkably less. There is no reason why a successful campaign cannot be waged against appendicitis.

In the early eighties, when appendicitis was first recognized as a distinctive disease, most sufferers were operated upon only after the appendix had ruptured. During the past 30 years this practice has greatly changed.

Forty per cent of the patients entering hospitals today give evidence of rupture of the appendix. This is unfortunate. When the appendix has actually ruptured, the recovery of the patient is made more stormy and difficult.

It is hoped the public will give greater regard to the seriousness of this disease. More attention should be given to it than we paid in the past. Dangers attendant on the operation no longer exist as in the days when the disease was first known.

Many interesting and instructive facts are learned from this study. One of them is that the persons who suffer most from this disease are those who have taken laxatives prior to the operation.

Bear in mind that if you have pain in the abdomen nothing should be taken by mouth. Certainly you should not take a laxative. Apply an ice bag to the abdomen and call your doctor.

Also remember that any abdominal pain that lasts for at least six hours demands expert opinion. Severe pains in the abdomen are signs of danger and you should at once consult your physician.

If you have had attacks of appendicitis and your physician has found the cause of the attacks and advised this operation, you need not hesitate to have it done. It is much wiser to walk into a hospital to be operated upon than be rushed in by an ambulance.

CHAPTER XXVII

Upon this tableau burst Collin, running from his room, a bathrobe over his pajamas, his feet bare. He took in the surface situation at a glance. Fanchon, pale, ice cold with determination, the revolver in her steady hand. Mrs. Carstairs sitting upright in bed, the clothes tossed about her, her lips set, her eyes bright with outrage; "Gill!" their late guest, still in the romantic costume, an overcoat partly concealing it, standing against the dresser, his hands held high, his lips curved to a sneer; and on the dresser, the open jewel case.

"Give me the gun, Evelyn," said Collin, quietly, "and telephone for the police."

There was no telephone extension in Jennie's bedroom. That much privacy, she demanded. She had been regretting it for the last few minutes.

"Evelyn?" asked Tony, speaking for the first time. He laughed. "Stand still, Fanchon," he ordered, sharply, "and make your explanations, and then we'll see if Mrs. Carstairs will be so anxious to bring the police into this."

"What do you mean?" asked Jennie as Collin's face darkened with angry blood "by speaking to my niece in such a fashion?"

"She is not your niece," Tony said coolly. "She planned this coup with me. But it didn't quite come off. His eyes went to Fanchon in an unmistakable expression of menace, mixed with a certain admiring triumph. "She feared, possibly, to exchange the easy flesh pots for the uncertain existence of a gangster's girl," said Tony.

"What the hell is this all about?" demanded Collin.

Fanchon spoke then. She spoke with extreme quiet. She said: "This situation is absurd. We aren't getting anywhere. Collin, take—take Tony into the library. Keep him covered. Tie him up, if necessary. And then, I'll tell you the truth. After that you can decide what to do with him—and with me."

"What truth?" asked Mrs. Carstairs quietly. She spoke, reaching for her robe and slippers. Her face had aged terribly but her voice was low and her expression had not changed. Fanchon's heart went out to her on a wave of sorrowful love.

Rev. George D. Keister, pastor.
Twenty-fifth Sunday after Trinity.
Sunday school 9:45 (Acts 28:16-31). H. E. Smith, supt.
Foundations in life are often shaken to great depths. There are profound questions concerning what really is secure and stable. Foundations and anchors upon which individuals depend may seem shaky and faulty. That is if they are only the security that is based upon faith and trust in God never shall be shaken. God is that one and only Infinite Power that can sustain the souls and spirits of men, when all seems taken away. There is no difficulty through which God is not able to sustain us. St. Paul felt this reassuring fact when he came to Jerusalem, and mountains of difficulty arose before him.
Morning worship 11:00. Sermon "The Blessings of Giving and Benevolence."
Selfishness is as natural to the human heart as is the instinct of self-preservation. Our interests, our aims and plans would just naturally center around our own ego, if allowed to run their free course. The principles of Christ are opposed to this. Upon the teachings of Christ is based the true spirit of giving of Benevolence. The gift of the Son of God started the movement of true giving. The serving and sacrificing life of our Savior is the basis of all true benevolence today.
This Sunday is the end of the liturgical year. The Gospels and Epistles center about the teaching of the coming of our Lord to Judgment. Many fanatics and enthusiasts have unduly been misled about this matter. Christ will come again. But the time, what the angels do not know. It is foolishness for men to pretend to know. The chief concern is to be ready when the time of His return is here.

The Golden Text is: "Bless the Lord, O my soul. O Lord my God, thou art very great; thou art clothed with honour and majesty" (Psalms 104:1).
Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "God that made the world and all things therein, seeing that he is the Lord of heaven and earth, dwelleth not in temples made with hands. Neither is worshipped with men's hands, as though he needed any thing, seeing he giveth to all life, and breath, and all things. For in him we live, and move, and have our being; as certain also of your own poets have said, For we are also his offspring" (Acts 17:24, 25, 26).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Keep distinctly in thought that man is the offspring of God, not of man; that man is spiritual, not material; that Soul is Spirit, outside of matter, never in it, never giving the body life and sensation."

It's the story of a girl who had to meet the problem of thousands of modern young wives—that of keeping a playboy husband from straying too far from the home hearth and heart—told as only the author of "Lovejoy" and "The Flapper Wife" could tell it.

PRACTICAL SIDE OF HOUSING

Of the various proposals to solve financial problems that have been suggested none has been granted a more favorable reception than President Hoover's plan for establishment of a system of home loan discount banks to release frozen real estate assets and promote a revival of home building. Since its publication Nov. 13 a vast deal of favorable comment has been forthcoming. Unlike the plan for a national credit corporation it was close to the individual problems of millions of home owners and others who hope to become home owners. It was a sound proposal for solution of an important domestic problem.

Congress will be asked to endorse the plan, which undoubtedly will have received the endorsement of Mr. Hoover's conference on home building and home ownership by that time. The conference is to convene in Washington Dec. 2. Congress convenes Dec. 4.

The problem of home building financing, while particularly acute at present, existed before the depression and will exist when it is over. The Hoover plan is intended to strengthen those institutions which make home financing all or part of their business permanently, as well as through the remainder of the depression.

It is common knowledge that residential building touched a new low for the depression in September. At present the principal prospect for betterment in this fundamental business activity is eventual accumulation of a housing shortage, such as led to the building boom that started in 1922 after the depression of 1921. The prospect is somewhat clouded, however, by "huddling"—the tendency in difficult times to move into smaller quarters and to "double up" with other families for the sake of living economy. This tendency not only is reflected in the demand for new housing space, but in the type of new building being done as well. Many new apartment houses, for instance, feature smaller living quarters than probably will be in demand when the depression is over.

These considerations, however, are closely connected with current conditions. In better times the opposite is true. Instead of "huddling" families "spread out" in larger quarters. The President's plan is designed to make it easier for them to afford more commodious quarters as quickly and easily as possible. A revival of building now would hasten recovery from the depression; a continuance of building, with the aid of more satisfactory financing, would help to stabilize business permanently. Strengthening of the credit system in home building is needed.

Funds for financing of home construction come chiefly from building and loan associations, insurance companies, mortgage companies and savings banks, through mortgages. It is one of the anomalies of real estate mortgage loans, however, that they are rated highly as safe investments, but are highly illiquid. The home owner who wants an extension finds that he cannot get it, due to extraordinary strain on his bank, perhaps. Unless he can raise money elsewhere, therefore, the mortgage may be foreclosed and the owner's equity wiped out. The general purpose behind Mr. Hoover's plan is to aid banks carrying large numbers of real estate mortgages, enabling them, in turn, to help home builders. A commendable feature of the plan, incidentally, is that it promises to accomplish its purpose without disturbing the existing and experienced institutions engaged directly in the business of home financing. The public, needless to say, is far more concerned with congressional action on this plan than it is with action on any one of several problems having an international flavor.

What Others Say

AMERICAN POLICY IN MANCHURIA

There has been much speculation regarding the essential aims of the policy of the United States toward the Sino-Japanese dispute over Manchuria. Recent developments indicate that the Washington administration fully realizes the complexity and gravity of the situation and has sought to follow a reasonable and truly impartial course conducive to peace and practical justice.

It has been assumed by many that Japan has pursued a deliberately aggressive policy toward China and that it intended, by hook or crook, to obtain control over Manchuria or those parts of it in which it claims an interest under treaties and informal understandings. It has been supposed that helpless, divided China was wholly innocent of positive or negative offense.

That, however, is not even an approximately correct representation of the facts. China is not able to protect Japanese citizens or Japanese property in Manchuria, and the so-called nationalist government in Nanking is not able to control the war lords operating in the remote eastern provinces. Japan has not acted without provocation, and orders to the Japanese to evacuate territory not in the railroad zone, regardless of consequences, are irrational and futile. And China is too anxious to unload the entire burden on the League of Nations or the United States—a hope that does not deserve encouragement.

The council of the league has invited rebuff by oversimplifying an intricate question. The United States, fortunately, has avoided that mistake, and is in position to act as the sincere friend of both China and Japan. It is to be borne in mind that Japan has its own imperialistic, militaristic and annexationist to reckon with, and that there has been sharp conflict between the war department and the foreign office in Tokyo. The latter has stood for conciliation, while the war office has known how to appeal to mob passion, prejudice and suspicion.

A way out of the Manchurian crisis may be found if the council of the league, following the example of the United States, gets down to realities, and proposes or approves plans which the Japanese emperor and his cabinet can accept without dangerous loss of prestige. There is no reason why evacuation of Manchuria and negotiations between China and Japan should not proceed simultaneously.

The Washington government deserves commendation for its intelligent handling of a perilous problem which, if dealt with rashly or dogmatically, might lead to the disaster the world is desirous of averting.—Chicago News

Leaders in World Affairs

Snapped as they strolled through the spacious grounds of the White House, President Hoover and Signor Dino Grandi, Foreign Minister of Italy, were caught in this informal pose. The youthful envoy of Premier Mussolini's Government deliberated with the American Chief Executive over matters of international importance during the former's visit to Washington. President Hoover is 21 years the senior of his foreign visitor, who is only 36.

WHERE JAPANESE WON DECISIVE BATTLE

A street scene in the ancient walled city of Tsitsihar, capital of the province of Heilungkiang, in Northeastern Manchuria, which Japanese troops captured with airplanes, artillery, infantry and cavalry from General Ma Chan-Shan's Chinese army in one of the most decisive battles of the Sino-Japanese "war." Once in command of Tsitsihar, the victorious Japanese pursued the fleeing Chinese farther north into territory under the wing of Soviet Russia. The battle which won Tsitsihar for the Nipponese was fought in rigid sub-zero temperatures. Map indicates location of city, and Mukden, where warfare originally centered.

Facts Concerning Appendicitis

In a medical survey recently made in Philadelphia, many interesting facts were brought to light concerning appendicitis. The statistics covering the clinical records of over 5,000 patients in 27 hospitals, were carefully studied.

It is hoped that out of this careful survey of figures and statistics, it may be possible to reduce the death rate in acute appendicitis. Diseases, like typhoid, diphtheria and smallpox are growing remarkably less. There is no reason why a successful campaign cannot be wage against appendicitis.

In the early eighties, when appendicitis was first recognized as a distinctive disease, most sufferers were operated upon only after the appendix had ruptured. During the past 50 years this practice has greatly changed.

Forty per cent of the patients entering hospitals today give evidence of rupture of the appendix. This is unfortunate. When the appendix has actually ruptured, the recovery of the patient is made more stormy and difficult.

It is hoped the public will give greater regard to the seriousness of this disease. More attention should be given to it than we paid in the past. Dangers attached to the operation no longer exist as in the days when the disease was first known.

Many interesting and instructive facts are learned from this study. One of them is that the persons who suffer most from this disease are those who have taken laxatives prior to the operation.

Bear in mind that if you have pain in the abdomen nothing should be taken by mouth. Certainly you should not take a laxative. Apply an ice bag to the abdomen and call your doctor.

Also remember that any abdominal pain that lasts for at least six hours demands expert opinion. Severe pains in the abdomen are signs of danger and you should at once consult your physician.

If you have had attacks of appendicitis and your physician has found the cause of the attacks and advised this operation, you need not hesitate to have it done. It is much wiser to walk into a hospital to be operated upon than be rushed in by an ambulance.

The Stars Say —

For Sunday, Nov. 22

Sunday's horoscope, while promising advancement, preferment and fulfilled ambitions for ecclesiastics and those engaged in philanthropies may not be of benefit in the ordinary run of activities. There is a sign of sundry fraud, scandal, disputes and litigation. Sign all writings cautiously.

If It's Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may look for some preferment, recognition or financial advantage during the year, but generally there is need for precaution and wise counsel, as there is menace of fraud, scandal, craft, strife and litigation, unless care be exercised. A child born on this day should be ambitious and capable but should be grounded in protective traits of precaution, self-restraint and firm control over speech and conduct, lest it invite many defeats in life.

Notable nativity: George Eliot, novelist.

For Monday, Nov. 23

Monday's astrological forecast is for a rather intriguing day with some peculiar or unusual developments attended by sudden changes or pounce. Negotiations with trusts, mergers or secret orders may bring these advantages, furthering fresh projects. The mind may lean toward shrewd methods and the personal relations, especially with elderly persons or females, may enhance the fortunes and the general state of happiness.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a sudden change or journey, probably in connection with new affiliations with merge, large corporations or secret bodies. An intriguing atmosphere prevails with unusual or singular circumstances or occurrences, although these may be characterized as sinister. A child born on this day should be original, skillful, resourceful and constructive, although perhaps predisposed to gain its end by stratagem.

Notable nativity: Franklin Pierce, former President United States.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21—Purely personal pliff: The tastiest milk toast in the world is at Shepherd's inn Cairo. I can't spell hemorrhage without looking it up in the dictionary. I read programs when stage dancers imitate mechanical dolls. Maurice Chevalier "Mugs" too much on the screen.

No one describes a dramatic scene with the simplicity of Somerset Maugham. I never met a person from Sacramento Nancy is a favorite feminine name. When I have time I let a barber give me "the works" sing, high frequency currents and all. I am strangely touched by old spinning wheels.

A play I remember more than any other is "Toebum." The best trained chorus was in the totem pole number of "Rose Marie." The book stirring me to the greatest laughter was Jerome K. Jerome's "Three Men in a Boat" more than 20 years ago. I lose a front door key about once a month.

I never wore a Panama hat, ate water cross or saw a hockey match. The song and singer pleasing me most in the past decade are "Gypsy Love Song" by John Steele. Someone stole a caricature of my by Caruso from my home. I think shamefully reckless international banking is the chief cause of our economic distress.

The St. Louis union station interests me more than any other railroad terminal. My deposit box contains the complete affidavit of a person who tried several times to blackmail me. People who keep on applauding at theaters make me furious. Think Ring Lardner is our greatest humorist.

Often I dream of walking up to a skinned beef on a meat hook to discover it a human corpse. I never drink water between meals but often a dozen while eating. I do not know a pronunciation exactly like James H. Quirk's. Fred Allen's voice puts my teeth on edge.

I speak to 100 people around town whom I never met. I was about to win a spelling match and a $10 prize at 18 but fell down on calligraphy. The blindest prizefight I ever saw was between Ace Hudkins and Sammy Baker in Los Angeles. Eddie Duchin is the best of the cafe pianists now current.

No paragraph of the year amused me so much as: "A stray dog with the name E. G. Caldwell has been about the Village for a few days."—Carroll County (N. H.) Independent. The New Yorker commented: "Not old Eddy Caldwell?" I once talked all evening to a lady introduced as Mrs. Lydia Pinkham and did not know until next day it was a frameup. I left town for several days.

I have been introduced to Rex Beach half dozen times and he always thinks it our first meeting. Gentlemen and ladies, that's IT. I usually quit my typewriter each afternoon at precisely quarter of five, although I rarely look at the clock. I have no idea what a passive participle or double negative are. A gang of cronies down in Texas nicknamed me "Old Buckskin." My father's favorite expression was "By Golly!" The house where I was born is to become a public library bearing my name.

I have vowed never to attend another banquet. The most interesting I ever attended was to Irvin Cobb at the old Waldorf. No speech was more than two minutes and every one rang the bell. I never had ambition to do any sort of work save what I have done for 18 years. I'm utterly uncomfortable in a room full of strangers but never have the nerve to sneak out. Ten years ago I gabbed garrulously to a Mr. Hermansworth for five minutes before I realized it was Lord Northcliffe and became completely inarticulate. I have fewer epistolary complaints about the depression from California than any other state.

There never was a red ink restaurant comparable to Madam Lalo's in West 39th street. Two people I met there without introduction 16 years ago are among my dearest friends. Gilbert Seldes is writing some of the best newspaper essays. I lie on the floor after a hot bath—merry-go-round, pin wheels and sky rockets. No juvenile in the past 20 years has touched Bernard Granville for cleverness.

Mexico is the most depressing country I ever visited. I've never cared to see a baseball game since the bribery scandals. Beatrice Lillie amused me singing off key and making false stumbles in the first Chariot Revue but not since Adele Astaire's comedy is also a minor enthusiasm. I now own 98 pickle forks.

CHAPTER XXVII

Upon this tableau burst Collin, running from his room, a bathrobe over his pajamas, his feet bare. He took in the surface situation at a glance. Fanchon, pale, ice cold with determination, the revolver in her steady hand. Mrs. Carstairs sitting upright in bed, the clothes tossed about her, her lips set, her eyes bright with outrage. "Gilli" her late guest, still in the romantic costume, an overcoat partly concealing a standing against the dresser, his hands held high, his lips curved to a snarl; and on the dresser, the open jewel case.

"Give me the gun, Evelyn," said Collin, quietly, "and telephone for the police."

There was no telephone extension in Jennie's bedroom. That much privacy, she demanded. She had been regretting it for the last few minutes.

"Evelyn?" asked Tony, speaking for the first time. He laughed. "Stand still, Fanchon," he ordered, sharply, "and make your explanations and then we'll see if Mrs. Carstairs will be so anxious to bring the police into this."

"What do you mean?" asked Jennie as Collin's face darkened with angry blood "by speaking to my niece in such a fashion?"

"She is not your niece," Tony said coolly. "She planned this coup with me. But it didn't quite come off. His eyes went to Fanchon in an unmistakable expression of menace, mixed with a certain admiring triumph. "She feared, possibly, to exchange the 'flesh and blood' for the uncertain existence of a gangster's girl," said Tony.

"What the hell is this all about?" demanded Collin.

Fanchon spoke then. She spoke with extreme quiet. She said:

"This situation is absurd. We aren't getting anywhere. Collin, take—take Tony into the library. Keep him covered. Tie him up, if necessary. And then, I'll tell you the truth. After that you can decide what to do with him—and with me."

"What truth?" asked Mrs. Carstairs quietly. She spoke, reaching for her robe and slippers. Her face had aged terribly but her voice was low and her expression had not changed. Fanchon's heart went out to her on a wave of sorrowful love and admiration. But she dared not look at Collin again as she answered.

"The truth about myself. He is quite right. I am not your niece. I am not Evelyn Howard. I am Fanchon Meredith."

"Not—Evelyn?" gasped Collin. Had she looked at him then she would have seen that a flash of most incredible joy swept over his face, blotting out the amazement. Then the amazement returned. He stared a look at Tony who, hands still high, leaned against the dresser.

Tony smiled evilly. Nothing was apparent in Collin's face now but sheer male anger.

"I'm getting rather tired of this position," said Tony blandly.

"Wait a moment," Fanchon stepped forward. She put her hands on Tony. She touched him lightly. "Tonight. But the felt in his overcoat pocket, she took out a wicked-looking gun, and kept it in her hand."

"Now," she said to Collin, "take him in the library."

Tony went first, prodded by Collin's revolver in his ribs. Fanchon followed closely, turning on the heels as she went. In the big book-lined room Collin indicated a straight chair. He said, briefly, looking at Fanchon:

"Strong cord in the desk drawer. Get it for me, will you? And call Jameson."

"No," she said, "better not. If you'll do what is necessary—I'll keep him covered. I promise."

She said bitterly as she saw the look of mingled distrust and question in Collin's eyes.

By the time Jennie joined them it had been done. Tony sat, as easily as possible, on the straight-backed chair, his hands and arms tied behind him, his legs lashed to the rungs. Collin sat in an easy chair opposite, the gun steady. Fanchon, in her plain tweed frock, stood against the desk. Her eyes were dark in a perfectly white face. Only her lips lived.

Jennie came in, and sat down by Collin. He gave her a reassuring glance.

"If you are not Evelyn Howard," asked Jennie, evenly, of Fanchon, "where is she?"

"I thought," said Fanchon, as evenly, "that she was dead. In the accident. But he"—she indicated Tony—"says she is not. That she is with him. Mentally, a child."

"My God!" exclaimed Collin, low. Jennie said, "Wait." Her lips shook. She turned to Fanchon. There was no anger in her eyes. Only a vast bewilderment. She said:

"I—we loved you very much. Somehow, we still do. Will you tell us everything—now—as briefly as possible—as truthfully?"

Fanchon had an impulse to cast herself on her knees beside that still, waiting figure. She clenched her hands on the desk. The knuckles were white. She leaned against the desk. She said:

"Yes."

She told them, low, almost in a monotone. The entire story. Who she was, how and why she had left Hawaii for San Francisco, meeting Evelyn Howard enroute. How she had met Tony... in the library. How she had gone on seeing him, caring for him romantically, as an inexperienced girl cares... and how she had found out who he was and what was his means of livelihood.

A lethal business. How there had been a murder; and headlines in the papers. How she had been hunted by police and press and how Tony learning of a vacancy in the chartered plane, had given her money, and had reserved her flight passage for her under the name of Miss Smith. And how, here again she had encountered Evelyn.

She spoke of all Evelyn had told her, she spoke, in dry phrases of her own envy and despair; of their likeness in coloring and height; of the photograph taken of them together on the boat. She spoke of telling Evelyn her own story, that stop overnight in the little hotel; and, briefly, of how Evelyn had refused help saying her aunt could not "afford" to help. "She was quite right, of course," said Fanchon at that point. She told of the second flight; of the accident. Her voice roughened and was dark with horror. She had not spoken of this before. Her listeners, Jennie Carstairs and her son, shuddered with her. And Jennie's eyes were soft with an understanding compassion.

HOLY TRINITY ENGLISH LUTHERAN

East State St. at Woodland ave. Rev. George D. Keister, pastor. Twenty-fifth Sunday after Trinity. Sunday school 9:45 (Acts 28:16-31). H. E. Smith, supt.

Foundations in life are often shaken to great depths. There are profound questions concerning what really is secure and stable. Foundations and anchors upon which individuals depend may seem shaky and faulty. That is if they are only the security that man can offer.

The foundation that is based upon faith and trust in God never shall be shaken. God is that one and only Infinite Power that can sustain the souls and spirits of men, when all seems taken away. There is no difficulty through which God is not able to sustain us. St. Paul felt this reassuring fact when he came to Jerusalem, and mountains of difficulty arose before him.

Morning worship 11:00. Sermon "The Blessings of Giving and Benevolence."

Selfishness is as natural to the human heart as is the instinct of self-preservation. Our interests, our aims and plans would just naturally center around our own ego, if allowed to run their free course. The principles of Christ are opposed to selfishness. They are enemy to egoism. Upon the teachings of Christ is based the true spirit of giving of Benevolence. The gift of the Son of God started the movement of true giving. The serving and sacrificing life of our Savior is the basis of all true benevolence today.

This Sunday is the end of the liturgical year. The Gospels and Epistles center about the teaching of the coming of our Lord to Judgment. Many fanatics and enthusiasts have unduly been misled about this matter. Christ will come again. But the time, what the angels do not know, it is foolishness for men to pretend to know. The chief concern is to be ready when the time of His return is here.

Luther League 6:30. The devotional topic is, "God's Gifts and my obligations."

PARIS—Through the generosity of the Rockefeller Endowment, the palace at Fontainebleau has been restored to its former condition before it was damaged by fire. ### Sorry to Leave

Vicki Baum (above), German author, has reason to regret her departure from the U. S. as she sails from New York for her homeland. The noted visitor, who sprang to fame overnight as a result of her book, "Grand Hotel," which was dramatized and is now being played in various parts of the world, says she is fond of America and is sure to return as soon as she can. We'll be seeing you then.

Winging Along with Father

You've heard of sons following in fathers' footsteps, but rarely does one see a father and son flying together like Captain Harry G. Montgomery (top right) and his son, Second Lieut. Harry, Jr., who are both members of the U. S. Army Air Corps, and are shown as they appeared at Bolling Field, Washington, D. C., recently. But lest you think that the Army has put something over on the Navy, the lower picture shows another father and son combination. Ensign John Raby (right) recently qualified as a naval aviator at Pensacola, Fla., is shown with his father, Rear-Admiral James J. Raby, who was similarly qualified in 1926.

These Winter Breakfasts

They were boasting of frugal breakfasts, the three dieters, and singing high the praises of the standard orange juice-toast-and-coffee combinations. Which is perfectly all right for those who require only that much. But while this may be a perfect breakfast for warm weather or for sedentary workers, certainly many persons who do heavy work and go about outdoors all morning—or growing children—need something more substantial.

There need be no fear of overdoing it these days of temperance in eating, for no matter what our actual behavior is in regard to drinking, the temperate attitude toward solid food seems to be a serious and permanent position. If there's any doubt about our reformation in this regard, all we need do is to look up the menus of our forefathers. What they ate for breakfast! "Pigs" feet, chicken livers, kidneys and hashed lamb, broiled chicken, steaks and chops are always good for breakfast," says a writer of the eighties. And suggests that "the summer breakfast can be very nice with crab, lobster, clams and other fresh fish." What would these lusty gourmands have said about our three-minute breakfasts, schemed so that they can be taken on the run? "Lamb chop with green peas, tripe à la Bourdelaise, broiled steak with watercress, breaded veal with tomato sauce, broiled shad's roe," are a few of the many breakfast dishes that were suggested. And for some curious but unexplained reason, "good cup of chocolate is recommended for clergymen, lawyers and travelers."

Somewhere between all this and the frugal toast-and-coffee of our day there is a happy medium, desirable for persons who do some really energetic work between dawn and noon. Eggs in any shape are a staple of course, but they can be varied by other dishes of substance. Kidneys and bacon are an appetizing combination on a cold morning. Broiled fish of the salted or smoked variety, either or baked in lemon juice are a favorite with many. Broiled kippers dressed with plenty of lemon juice are an acquired taste, and very good, too.

The housekeeper who plans several meals ahead will, when buying fish, take more than is necessary for that particular meal, whether lunch or dinner. Broiled or baked fish like mackerel, haddock, halibut, etc., if left over can be prepared the next morning as a breakfast dish or creamed fish on toast. Similarly roast meats like beef, lamb, or chicken, can be creamed for breakfast, or if there are left-over boiled potatoes they can be cut into very small cubes and fried or baked with a bit of bacon and some minced onions. Started with coffee, this dish will take no longer to cook, and topped with a poached egg, will start off properly the worker who has a hard day ahead of him.

Orange juice can well be a standard beginning for the day, and even if there is other fruit like stewed prunes, pears, apple sauce, etc., for breakfast, orange juice can be taken at the beginning. It is as essential to the diet as water, and is to be regarded as an indispensable beverage, not as one of the food items on the menu.

Balloon Golf Ball Outlawed for 1932

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—The "balloon" golf ball made its exit today with the announcement by H. H. Ramsay, president of the United States Golf association, that the executive committee had adopted a new and heavier ball, effective January 1, 1932.

"Effective for play January 1, 1932, the new size of the golf ball shall be not less than 1.68 inches in diameter, and the weight shall be not greater than 1.62 ounces avoirdupois.

"The foregoing specifications retain the size of the present ball and change the weight specification back to the weight of the old ball."

The "balloon" ball, which has borne the official stamp of approval for the last year, weighed only 1.55 ounces, and was the object of widespread complaint that it was too light to hold its true course in the wind.

The executive committee, which was in session almost 12 hours yesterday, passed no other important legislation, Ramsay said.

Pure food, pure milk, pure water—in all the things you eat or drink, you want absolute purity.

Purity counts in cigarettes, too

Making cigarettes as pure as they can be made is our business. And it's your business, too—because you smoke them.

All the materials that go into the making of CHESTERFIELD cigarettes are tested again and again by expert research chemists to see that they are absolutely clean and pure. Just like the things you eat or drink.

The tobacco is pure. The right kind—mild, sweet and ripe! Handled throughout by the most modern machinery.

The paper is pure. Clean. White. The best cigarette paper that money can buy.

There is cleanliness in every step of CHESTERFIELD's manufacture. Old-fashioned methods have been discarded, and CHESTERFIELDS are made and packed in modern sanitary factories where even the air is washed, and changed every four-and-one-half minutes.

Every day more men and women are changing to CHESTERFIELD. And changing for good! Four big reasons clinch the choice: Milder—Taste Better—Pure—Satisfy.

fresh water there to supply every acre that needs water, and ship canals from the middle west to the Atlantic, and from the lake region through the Mississippi valley to New Orleans, the Gulf of Mexico and the Pacific, through Panama.

THIS is a beautiful country stretching from ocean to ocean to the other, from the Arctic to the tropics. Within its borders all Americans deal freely with each other protected by tariff from unjust, or undesirable foreign competition.

American statesmen have plenty to do here at home with out making their countrymen responsible for the fact that Europe won't stop fighting and Asia won't stop marauding.

ON ONE SIDE of your map are the Great Lakes and great cities, New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Washington, Savannah, Jacksonville, Atlanta, Buffalo, Toledo, Detroit. To an easterner that sounds like "about all of the United States."

That is only one slice along the Atlantic coast. The bulk of the United States is all to the west.

UNTIL YOU have traveled along the northern line of the United States and down into Florida along the coast across through Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, along the Gulf and on through vast Texas, then through Arizona along the Pacific through a thousand miles of California and on through Oregon and Washington to Seattle, you have no idea of this country.

Having seen it, you realize how preposterous it is that those managing such a country should ask England or France "How many battleships may we build, please, and what may we do to protect the country that is our own?"

BAYARD, Neb.—To commemorate the route taken by pony express riders in the early days, a nine-foot granite marker has been set near here. The stone is on the route once followed from Julesburg, Colo., to Mud Springs.

MUKDEN, MANCHURIA, Nov. 21.—Japanese army headquarters here reported today that a new concentration of Chinese troops including a brigade of cavalry and some infantry forces, is taking place in southwest Manchuria.

The concentration is centered around Tungshiao and Paiching, the headquarters announcement said and yesterday three additional trainloads of Chinese infantry arrived on this side of the great wall.

Reinforcements Arrive
 A brigade of Japanese reinforcements consisting of infantry, cavalry, artillery and machine gun companies arrived here this morning.

A number of aircraft also accompanied the brigade. The soldiers are being quartered in the Chinese barracks outside the east wall of the city and next to Chang Hsueh-Liang's immense up-to-date arsenal which has been in Japanese hands since the end of September.

It is understood the new brigade numbers approximately 5,000 men which, it was believed here, brings the total number of Japanese troops now in Manchuria up to 20,000 more than the number allowed by the treaties.

PARIS—A complete replica of the Temple of Astarte was made entirely of sugar and shown at the Paris Cookery Exhibition in Paris, made by M. Charles Blechet, of Narbonne. The model contained 4,500 pieces of sugar and took 60 days to complete.

Zone of War in Manchuria

Here's the situation in the Manchurian theatre of war as Chinese and Japanese troops are variously reported gaining or losing along a wide front. Reports from Japanese sources have indicated the capture of Anganchi and Tsitsihar in a battle in which the "Russian sphere" hopelessly defeated. The checked area marks the "Russian sphere" which the Japanese have now penetrated. The shaded portion of which the Japanese have now penetrated. SMITH DENIES SLAYING WIFE found his voice and cried, "May God bless every man in this room and I hope they never have to face what I am facing."
 Condemned Man Goes To Death Calmly; Asks Forgiveness

It was then that Tibby's thoughts turned to his wife, Clara, whose life was taken in May 1930, because she stood in the way of his illicit romance with Mrs. Lowther, a quarter-breed Indian girl who by her own confession fired the fatal shot.

"God forgive me for my sins," Smith sobbed, "and take me to heaven to be with my grandfather, my sister and my dear wife whom I"—here his voice was silenced by the buzz of the electric current but it rose again as the charge struck.

The last audible sound came as his hands clenched in death.

Par amour Awaits Trial
 Smith failed to speak of Mrs. Lowther who was lifted from the shadow of death by a decision of the appellate court granting her a new trial and a change of venue from Ashtabula county to Wooster, Wayne county. She was convicted at her first trial and sentenced to die.

Smith's note refusing to accept responsibility for the plot was presented by Mrs. Thomas after the execution. It was written after Smith had talked with Attorney Marvin, counsel for Mrs. Lowther, who hoped the doomed man might absolve the Indian girl of blame for the crime. Mrs. Lowther's second trial will be held December 7. The note said:

Denies Guilt
 "I, T. L. Smith, truthfully say that I had nothing whatever to do with the plotting or slaying of my beloved wife, Clara. I wish everyone to know I am innocent of this crime, and before my God I will be honestly judged and my innocence will be proven."

Smith spent his last day talking with his father and praying. Most of his conversation was of his three children and his mother who lives in Ashtabula. The young truckman expressed no surprise when Governor White failed to grant commutation.

"It was no more than I expected," he said.

WOOSTER CONQUERS NILES, 33-0, TO CAPTURE BIG TEN LAURELS

THE DAY IN SPORTS

DEMPSEY TRIES COMEBACK
LOOKS GOOD IN EXHIBITION
LEGS APPEAR STRONG

Jack Dempsey's exhibition tour has established one fact: Dempsey is sincere in his attempt to whip himself into physical condition to attempt a comeback.

The former heavyweight champion is making big money touring the country fighting two-round exhibitions, but he also is making an honest effort to get into the finest physical condition possible to attempt to win back the title for himself and America.

After appearing at Moline, Ill., recently in a pair of bouts against George Neron and Pete Wistort, tough but third-rate opponents, Dempsey told General John V. Clinkin, president of the National Boxing Association and chairman of the Illinois State Athletic Commission, he wasn't satisfied with his condition.

"I'm not ready yet," Dempsey said. "I am not satisfied in my own mind that I have the stuff. For the present I'm going to continue to try myself out against boys who can give me a real test."

Dempsey failed to knock out either Neron or Wistort. In his previous appearance at Omaha, Neb., he failed to knock out Bearcat Wright, a negro who was flattened by Primo Carnera in one round.

The public, however, overlooks the fact that Dempsey is using 16-ounce gloves in his exhibitions. The regulation gloves for a contest are six-ounces.

The crowd booed Dempsey at Moline because he failed to knock out his opponents. The public has only one idea about Dempsey, and it calls for a knock out every time he appears, or they feel they haven't received their money's worth. Dempsey hadn't fully recovered from an attack of influenza when he appeared at Moline. But the public wasn't concerned about that or 16-ounce gloves.

As far as Dempsey's legs are concerned, they appear to be just a bit stronger at 36 than they were when he met Gene Tunney at Soldier Field, Chicago, in 1927. He has been doing seven miles of road work every morning with Jerry Lavada, his faithful Greek trainer, while on tour.

The public wants to see Dempsey come back, but the old Manassa Mauler doesn't want to get back into the ring to be hacked to pieces just for his cut of a big stake. Dempsey wants to be reasonably sure he has brought himself back some more close to the fighting form he knew in his heyday before attempting another comeback.

Louis Quinn, the last of the "Four Vagabonds" who recently toured California, is back home. James R. Townsend, once the city's leading billiardist, now getting up in years, is seriously ill at his home, North Lincoln ave. Alliance fans are betting heavy on the Aviators against Salem.

Salem High underclassmen trounced seniors, 19-0, at Reilly stadium Friday. The youngsters ripped through the older stars almost at will while Ed Beck, French and Carpenter were held helpless in their offensive attempts. The game was held behind locked gates. Secret practices will continue all next week.

J. H. Sinclair is having plenty of luck in his hunting this year. Everybody is getting the limit in rabbits.

If you are a huntsman or fisherman you may want to know that: J. G. Miller and George Green, white of having time a running white-tail buck against an automobile speedometer. The speed registered was 46 miles per hour, or a mile in about 1.31—a higher speed flight than any thoroughbred race horse ever has shown. Man-o'-War's best was a mile around 1.33.

Clay bird shooting is becoming more and more popular among practicing riflemen. Instead of shooting targets flung from a trap the "bird" is set stationary. There never can be any doubt about a hit.

Shot-shells now are made for use in the standard service pistol, which gives the man who cares a pocket shotgun.

Many hunters claim the canvas-covered canoe found up under more punishment, pound for pound in weight, than any other craft.

Dogs used for duck hunting in the great Canadian northwest are said to be the most patient of all the breeds.

Old-time hunters refuse to believe the hunting dog can thrive on biscuit food alone. Many assert a ration of table scraps now and then, along with biscuit fodder, is the proper thing to promote general health for the huntsman's best friend.

Bird breeders in many sections are finding a stronger demand for the bob-white quail than for pheasants of any breed.

The Hungarian partridge and the ringnecked pheasant are much in demand in Middle Western states for restocking upland hunting grounds.

The old hunter cautions all cocks to be sure a venison is hung up for several days to thoroughly dry and cool before preparing for table use. If it freezes—so much the better.

VICTORS CLIMB TO FIRST RANK IN N. E. O. LOOP

Taliaferro Leads School With 4 Touchdowns; Tops Scoring
CAPTAIN RUNS 70 YARDS FOR SCORE
Size of Score Surprises Dopesters; Marks Ninth Straight Victory

WOOSTER, Nov. 21.—An unexpectedly powerful Wooster High school team advanced into the front ranks of Northeastern Ohio "Big Ten" league competition here today with a decisive 33-0 victory over a touted Niles schoolboy gridiron eleven.

Wins 4 League Games
It was Wooster's fourth straight N. E. O. league victory and the ninth straight of the season, giving the school one of the outstanding grid records in the district.

Capt. Bouncey Taliaferro was the outstanding man in the game, scoring four touchdowns and two extra points to push him into the lead in the Big Ten scoring with sixteen touchdowns and six extra points.

The "Generals" leader literally ran wild in his last appearance on the local gridiron and made several long runs, one of which was for 70 yards off tackle for a touchdown in the fourth period.

Victory Surprises Dopesters
The size of the score was a complete surprise as Niles was slated to give the locals their hardest game of the year. The visitors showed a powerful running attack in mid-field but always were held for downs when they approached the Wooster goal.

Wooster's only loss of the year was at the hands of Millersburg, 13 to 0, in the opener.

TEN MT. UNION PLAYERS CLOSE GRID CAREERS

ALLIANCE, Nov. 21.—Ten Mount Union football luminaries will go into the Thanksgiving day game here with Akron for their last gridiron battle. Seven are regulars and among Thorpe's best, three are leading subs.

careers as well as under graduate careers are Leo Grimes, fullback, Leroy Raber, end, James Wiand, end, Glenn Nagy, guard, John Moore, center, Mathew Montecalvo, half, Glen Goss, half, Dietrich Cordes, substitute tackle, William Bonfield, substitute guard, and Lawrence Medoff, substitute end.

It will be a decided blow to Mt. Union's grid prospects to lose so many men who have been outstanding through three years of varsity football.

Presidents Liked Wrestling Racket

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—If sports writers of 1931 should refer to Abraham Lincoln or George Washington as "bachelors," loyal citizens, no doubt, would call out the guard.

But they would be all wrong. Lincoln was a grappler in his youth and for quite a spell was champion of Sangamon county, Ill. He never lost his love for the sport, and, while president, went through many secret sessions of wrestling to keep fit.

Nor was Lincoln the only wrestling president. Washington, as well as being one of the finest athletes of his time, often competed in the mat sport. As commanding officer at Valley Forge he used his catch-as-catch-can methods to avail against his generals.

PARIS—France's first modern residence made entirely of glass has just been completed. The unique dwelling is in the Aue Saint-Guillemine and was constructed by Pierre Chareau. A stairway in the center of the large lobby winds up to the first floor. All of the doors, both outside and inside closet doors, are made round and are of iron, opening like those of a safe, with a combination. The glass used in the walls is six centimeters thick and is set in steel frames.

RED LODGE, Mont.—Glacial ice, a thick layer laid down centuries ago, has been uncovered by workmen on the new Red Lodge-Cook City highway. The layer of ice, depth and breadth unknown as yet, was encountered on the mountain wall above Rock Creek.

Notre Dame-Trojan Contest Heads Nation's Grid Menu

(By Associated Press)
NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—The football map was split into three sections with South Bend the point of greatest intensity.

At the Indiana city the most important battle of the day from a national championship angle sent the Notre Dame ramblers into action against the Trojans of Southern California.

The East's contribution was the 30th classic between Harvard and Yale at Cambridge. In the far west, the traditional duel involving Stanford and California at Palo Alto was the high spot.

Large Crowds Expected
These three games alone accounted for about 200,000 of the day's expected aggregate attendance with about 90,000 at Palo Alto and more than 50,000 at Cambridge and South Bend.

Harvard was the favorite at Cambridge, and Stanford and California appeared evenly matched although the latter was a slight public choice.

Aside from this trio of pivotal contests there were a score of others of varying interest.

The Big Ten, where Northwestern seems to have a strangle hold on the championship, presented a full slate of five contests—Northwestern vs. Iowa; Illinois vs. Ohio State; Minnesota vs. Michigan; Purdue vs. Indiana and Wisconsin vs. Chicago.

The Big Six championship was at stake in a clash of Iowa State and Nebraska.

IRISH FAVORED OVER TROJANS; 50,000 AT GAME

Notre Dame Seeks Fifth Victory Over Southern California Eleven
BY PAUL MICKELSON, Associated Sports Writer
SOUTH BEND, IND., Nov. 21.—Notre Dame's football hurricane, which has ravaged the gridiron of America for almost three straight years, headed once more against the breakers of Southern California today.

Expect Hard Battle
Four times in five years has the big hurricane brushed aside the Trojan breakers, but today was another day and a hard fought battle, jammed with 60 minutes of thrills and spills on a promised wet field and before a record throng of 50,000 spectators, was in prospect.

Because of tradition and last year's surprising 27 to 0 triumph over their new but great rivals, Notre Dame's big army was ranked as a slight favorite.

Irish Outweighed
From past performances, there wasn't much to choose between the two teams. Both had great scoring and defensive records, although the Trojans, with a two pound disadvantage in the line and a 4½ advantage in the backfield, outweighed Notre Dame four pounds a man.

BUCKEYES MEET ILLINOIS ELEVEN

40,000 Persons to Watch Old Rivals Clash At Columbus Stadium
COLUMBUS, Nov. 21.—Ohio State university, victim of only one western conference defeat and a university of Illinois squad, that has been unable to register a big ten victory this year, meet this afternoon in Ohio stadium in the finale of the local season. Officials predicted a crowd of near 40,000 persons will see the game.

After a short workout at the stadium yesterday afternoon both Sam Williamson of the Buckeyes and Bob Zupke of the Illini pronounced their teams to be in good physical condition for the game and both were expecting a hard battle.

"We haven't done much this year," said Zupke, "but we still have a few tricks up our sleeve to pull on Ohio. You'll see a good ball game." Williamson was reluctant to make any prediction. "They're always tough against us," he said, "but I believe we have the power and reserve strength to pull through."

Wrestling Results

(By Associated Press)
OTTAWA, ONT.—Ed Don George, 221, North Java, N. Y., defeated Joe Devito, 215, Providence, R. I., two out of three falls (Devito first 10-45; George second 1:25 and third 5:00).

PHILADELPHIA—Ray Steele, California, threw Herb Freeman, New York, 52-31; Earl McGready, Oklahoma, and Dick Davis, California, drew, 45-00.

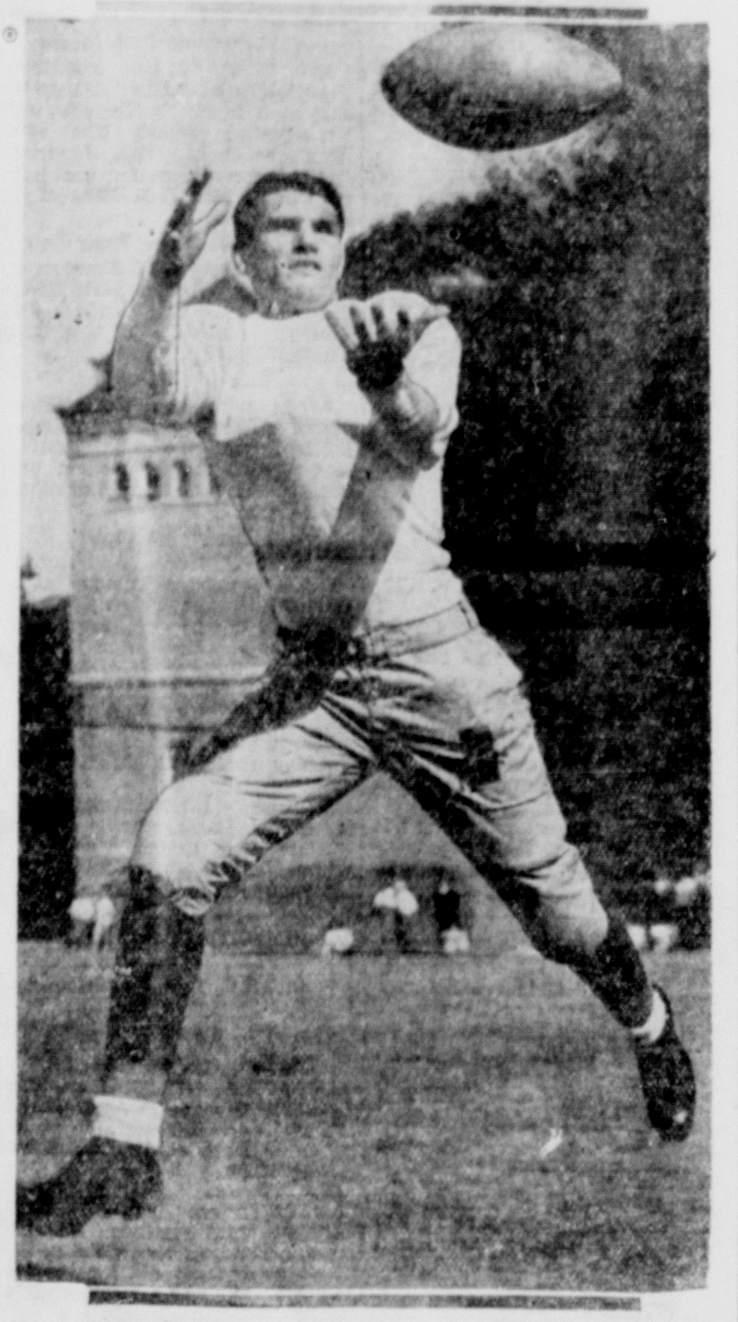

BOSTON—Matros Kirilenko, Russia, defeated Rudy Dusek, Omaha, 31-35 (Dusek disqualified for using strangle hold); Kola Kwariani, Russia, threw Tiny Roebuck, Oklahoma 16-30.

Cupid Does Some Scoring

Gane McEver (above), all-American halfback of the University of Tennessee and the nation's highest gridiron scorer in 1929, has discovered that Cupid can do a little expert scoring on his own account. McEver's engagement to Joyce Burnett (inset), of Knoxville, a teacher in the little mountain village of New Hopewell, Tenn., has been announced. Wedding bells are due to peal in the Spring.

All-America Candidate

Garret Arbelbide, brilliant end on the University of Southern California football team, is rated one of the best flankers in the country today. He is fast, aggressive, and can catch passes with the best of them and is likely to cause Notre Dame plenty of trouble when the teams clash at South Bend, Ind. today.

Stratton to Oppose Detroit Wrestler Here December 1

Second Grapple Show To Be Held at Memorial Building Gym
Enthusiasm over the reception given Salem fans by his first wrestling show here last Tuesday, Al Zill will present a second exhibition of the catch-as-catch-can racket here on Tuesday, December 1.

Walter Stratton of Letonia, who won a sensational match with Paul Orth of Massillon in the inaugural show, will battle Speedy Schaffer of Detroit, Mich., in the main match.

Pete Merrill, billed as the "Persian Bismillah", in America seeking wrestling laurels at 170 pounds, opposes another foreigner, Martino Angelo, of Italy, in the semi-final bout.

Stratton's go with Schaffer will be for best two out of three falls with two hour limit. The semi-final will be two out of three falls also, but with a limit of one hour.

A 10-minute curtain raiser is also being arranged. Jim Keschire will be the announcer.

Nine Regulars Among Graduating Players; Several Stars Return

Fifteen Salem High varsity gridders, among them a group of the team's leading stars during the 1931 campaign, will go on to Red and Black football after the close of the present season.

Nine members of Coach Floyd Stone's first eleven, players who were invariably in the starting lineups of games played this year, are among the list of students scheduled to receive diplomas next June.

Graduation will hit the squad hard, star linemen and backfield players being included.

Four Backs Graduate
Only one member of Stone's regular backfield, a quartet that has won recognition as one of the district's outstanding offensive combinations, will be back next year. Ed Beck, John French and Jack Carpenter, are to don scholastic grid regalia for the last time, along with Raymond Moff, reserve halfback, leaving only Gordon Keyes, a junior.

Stone and Lewis give careful attention to the development of the underclassmen, hoping thereby to produce among the 30-odd reserve players some of varsity ability. Both express themselves as well satisfied with talents displayed by the younger crop of gridders this year.

Stone, who started out the present season with little hopes of producing a team of more than average ability, is keenly optimistic as a result of the work done among reserves by Lewis.

The nine senior gridders hope to climax their scholastic careers with a victory over the Alliance eleven, giving Salem High a one-game edge over the rivals in the series which dates back to 1896. At the present time each school holds 14 victories while four others have ended in ties.

Stone today announced that practices will be held starting Monday, behind locked gates with all spectators barred. He has every confidence that the struggle with the Aviators will be among the hardest fought of the season and will start working his varsity out with great seriousness next week.

Fisher, who might have started at tackle against Alliance, is ineligible this week and was not permitted to participate in practice sessions. It is possible that he may be able to qualify for the game by bringing grades in two subjects up to passing when the eligibility list is passed to instructors Monday.

Heading the list of players returning are Daniel Alexander, Furn

Play Alliance Thursday
The curtain will be drawn on the football careers of these 14 lads next Thursday morning when the Quakers battle their traditional Alliance High foe for the 33rd time in 35 years. The game is booked to start at 9:30 a. m. with Eddie Howell of Sebring, Dave Williams of Girard and O. S. Ellis of Youngstown as officials.

Despite the heavy toll exacted of varsity players by graduation, should all his underclassmen return, Coach Stone looks forward to the 1932 season as one which should bring out another successful grid eleven here. Lads with outstanding ability are listed among the youths who will be available for the varsity next year.

In Talkie Role

Will Rogers, special writer for The News, is starred in "Ambassador Bill," playing at the State Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

PROFITABLE
Develop the profitable habit of reading all advertisements in The News every night.

THEATER Attractions

"The late Robert Williams" last screen performance that of leading player in "Platinum Blonde," a drama in which he climaxed a rapid rise to stardom, and another Will Rogers talkie, "Ambassador Bill," are the feature talking picture attractions scheduled, starting Sunday, at the Grand and State theaters.

Picture Ranks High
Williams, one of Broadway's most noted stage players, played his first real starring role in "Platinum Blonde" but died only a short time after it was given its premiere in Hollywood. Cast in minor talkie roles for his first few pictures, he finally gained recognition in "Devotion" and was selected as the leading player for "Platinum Blonde," which will appear at the Grand three days.

Loretta Young and Jean Harlow play leading feminine roles opposite Williams with Reginald Owen, Louise Hale Edmund Breese, Donald Dillaway and Halliwell Hobbs in minor roles. Greta Nissen and Marguerite Churchill support the famous columnist-humorist Rogers in "Ambassador Bill," at the State tomorrow, Monday and Tuesday. Rogers is again shown in a mythical kingdom, somewhat similar to that pictured in "Connecticut Yankee," and is ably supported by a fine cast that includes Tad Alexander, Gustav von Seifertitz, Arnold Korff and Tom Ricketts.

Dix Feature Coming
High adventure and romance run hand in hand in "Secret Service," the latest Richard Dix vehicle which will be shown at the Grand Wednesday and Thursday. Shirley Grey, Nance O'Neil, Virginia Sale, Gavin Gordon and Florence Lake take leading roles in the supporting cast.

"Touchdown," a play of the gridiron previewed to be even better entertainment than "Spirit of Notre Dame," and which shows in its cast a number of America's great college stars, will play at the State on Wednesday and Thursday. Howard "Tad" Jones, famous University of Southern California coach, Roy Riegels, all-America center who gained notoriety when he picked up a fumble and ran to the wrong goal, Tom Lieb, assistant Notre Dame coach, and other noted grid figures appear in the picture.

Richard Arlen, Jack Oakie and Charles Starrett play leading roles, supported by Regis Toomey and Peggy Shannon.

Claudette Colbert, co-starred with Gary Cooper, is shown in "His Woman," at the State Friday and Saturday. The Grand shows Tom Keene in "Freighters of Destiny" the same two days.

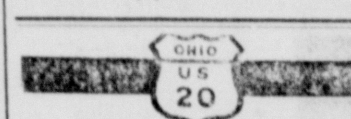

"Shanghai'd Love" at the Grand and "Are These Our Children?" at the State are today's features.

Three Are Killed By Chemical Fumes

(By Associated Press)

DAYTON, Nov. 21.—Walter Becker, 25, Edward Puterbaugh, 26, and George Conrad, 38 employed at the plant of the Thomas & Hochwalt laboratories here were killed by fumes and poison remaining in a large benzol tank which they were cleaning in the yard adjacent to the plant this morning.

Becker and Puterbaugh had entered the tank shortly after 7 a. m. to clean it, the chemicals having been previously removed. It is believed they were in the tank for about 20 minutes, before Conrad, coming to assist the men in their work, went into the tank, seeing their plight, and he too was overcome.

Walter Lackmeyer, and Louis Curtner other employees at the factory, donning gas masks, went into the tank and brought the men into the open air. City firemen worked more than an hour in a futile effort to revive them.
